THE HONGKONG DISPENSARY Hongkong, 4th February, 1892.

Hongkong, April 6rm, 1892.

From time to time lately there have appeared in the Shanghai papers accounts of the tortures inflicted by the Deputy Yo on certain Chinese who have been accused of being implicated in the Kolao-hui affair. In another column we reproduce from the Mercury a description of the pitiable condition to which one of the hapless victims has been reduced. It is impossible to read the desaription without a feeling of burning indig nation that such things should be possible. The matter is one which appeals in an almost personal sense to every Englishman, for the unfortunate men who have been subjected to Yu's barbarities are innocent victime of Mason's criminal folly. If the tor- appointed to Japan vice Mr Fraser. tures were continued public agitation on the subject would be a duty incumbent on the British communities at all the Treaty Ports and in Hongkong. In reply to a question about his own two houseboys. Mason said be had spoken in a similar strain to the younger of the boys, Hau-chu-ting. but as for his brother. Hsn-chun-san, he (Mason) had never addressed to him a word on the subject of the Kolao-hui.

In fact, Hsu-chun-san was dismissed from Mason's service in August, 1889, two years before any talk arose about the Kolao-hul. When Mason spoke to the other boy in the summer of last year, he told him to tell his brother Hsuchun-san to meet him (Mason) at the French Hotel in Shanghai at a certain date, but the boy never put in an appearance, and never heard, as for as he (Mason) know, a word about the so-called conspiracy. Neither of these boys was at all intelligent, nor did the one he spoke to seem to treat his talk as serious. The story about his initiation into the society was nonsense. Anyway, the money that had been spent on arms in Hongkong was all Mason's own savings, he said, and with a laugh he added "it was all I had in the world. I have now only my clothes and some £24 in the bank at home. In fact I am a ruined man. I suppose I must go home and sponge upon my friends till I can earn something for myself."

"What about the Chinking road coolie " Well, you see I was the honorary secretary of the Road Committee and had control over a the coolies, and Lam sorry to say I used that position to carry out my private plans. I spoke to this old coolie about the 'rumpus' I was getting up and told him to spread the story abroad. If he did not consent, I said I should dismiss him, as I had done his brothers, and he had no option but to do: whatever I told him." The sweet simplicity of the above heading may not convey much to the reader unlearned in goography, but it means a good deal for all that. Thibet happens to be a country which its inhabitants prefer to be unknown to the outsider. They liave, too, taken very effloient measures to enforce this preference of theirs; and the consequence is that our maps of Thibet either show the blankness of ignorance or a graceful profusion of monntheir artistic effect. While some theatrical performances were being enacted in a temple, a number of Manchus, not being satisfied with seeing the play from below, forced their way through the crowd to get on the stage. The actors remonstrated with them and a quarrel ensued which soon led to a rough-and-tumble fight. Being out-numbured, the Manchus were badly beaten and went away. But they soon reappeared on the scene in greater force, and all armad with weapons. In the encounter which followed a number of Chinese and Manchus were killed and it was not until the Taotai's appearance on the scene that l the fight terminated.

News from Tajenshan announces that an engarement had taken place between the rebels and a small detachment of the Imperial troops under Colonel Ling on the 11th March, in which two of the soldiers were killed and Colonel Ling came near being shot by the rebels. Owing to their inferiority in numbers, the Imperial troops had to retire from the fight, to wait for reinforcement which soon arrived. Upon resuming the engagement seven rebels were captured, and on the following day, when fighting was resumed, the second son of Tan Yun-tsin; and another chief, wearing a yellow coat, were taken prisoners together with 90 others, a number of rebels being killed or woundtains and lakes the principal value of which is ed at the same time. A few days ago we published a telegram addressed by the French Consul at Lungchow to the Governor-General of Indo-China, reporting arising among the Miaotze. Mr. Gustav Oberg, Head Office.........40, THREADNEEDLE STREET who has just returned from a journey to Yunnan, informs us that he passed through the district where the rising is said to have occurred, and that it is only an affair of starving villagers who have turned banditti. On the 8th March Mr. Oberg was at Song Lam, where shortly before the band had robbed two rich merchants of their property. Their numbers were variously giren as from 100 to 200. It was not believed that they possessed any firearms, for no shots had been fired, and no bodily harm had been done to any one. As to who the men were no difference of opinion existed at all; they were Too Yans, a name that the Chinese apply to the aborigines. It appears the rice crop in the district had been short and the officials had been buying up largely to fill the Government granaries, causing, the price to rise considerably, but this extended only over a comparatively limited area, for at Pak-sik to the westward and Nanning fu to the eastward the price of grain was not much higher than in good years. It is therefore improbable that the disturbance will spread. When Mr. Oberg passed through soldiers had already been sent | D. Grings, Esq after the marauders from Peng-ma. A week CHAN KIT SHAN, Es 1. later, on his arrival at Nanning-fu Mr. Oberg C. J. Hirst, Esq. Kwan to Chur found that rumour had magnified the affair into
